Notes with Blair

- Each of the pages should match the vibe of the individual project
- Focusing primarily on the feature films rather than each of their projects
- More image centric than text heavy
 - o Text more descriptive of the images themselves
- Landing page as just an opening page that the user can't really navigate back to
 - o Larger texture in the background with typographic styling as the main focus
 - o Should be the studio logo with the different major projects beneath it
- Navigation bar as a standard layout with the films listed across the top (if space permits) at the larger size, and in a hamburger menu when the site is smaller
 - o Should include the site logo (which you can produce yourself if you feel that the styling of the logo as-is doesn't match what you're going for)
